

I claim:

1. An identified structure of a controlling bulb and a normal bulb of a decorative light string, wherein the controlling bulb is received in a holder having several grooves and is then received in a socket having relating projections, while the normal bulb is received in another holder having several grooves and is then received in a relating socket having relating projections; the projections and the grooves on the socket and the socket of the controlling bulb having different positions from those of the normal bulb.

10